

Third Battle of Marne Is On

Driving across country still bearing the marks of 1918, American armies have plunged through captured Troyes to the Marne and beyond in onslaught pointed at Germany's frontiers. In the south, troops racing up the Rhone valley bypassed Lyon and penetrated past Annecy, in sweep toward Belfort, natural pass to southwest Germany. Broken arrows indicate projected drives.

The War
Today...By DeWitt MacKenzie

WE ARE ON THE VERGE of the beaten Hitler's great retreat from western France to the defenses of his own frontier where he plans to fight just as long as he can find men who are willing to risk their lives for him.

Events have moved rapidly during the past few hours. Any chance the Germans may have had of holding the strategic line of the Marne river have been nullified by Gen. Patton's drive to the World War battlefield of Chateau-Thierry, hallowed by the gallantry of our doughboys of a generation ago, and his daring thrust 14 miles northward from Meux on that river.

This move by the adventurous two-gun commander not only has cut the river, but it has decidedly increased the German danger of being flanked. Meantime westward toward the sea the Canadian-British forces have established another bridgehead across the Seine near the coast, thus increasing the very sure Allied grip on that river.

The Seine and the Marne form a natural defensive barrier across northern France, and it had been the obvious intention of the Hitlerites to make a strangle stand there, since this position protects their all-important channel defenses to the north and their gateway through Belgium to the Reich. Now they will have to pull out quickly or suffer another disaster such as has been visited on them in the battle of Normandy.

Actually it will be surprising if the Germans aren't already in the process of withdrawing. Their probable intention is to make their next big defense on the Somme river in

AGREEMENT ON SECURITY PLAN
IS ANNOUNCEDProposed Council To Include Big Powers, Plus
Smaller Nations

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—The Dumbarton Oaks conference, announced today "general agreement" on the form of an international security organization, including a council composed of big powers plus a number of smaller nations.

The conferees declined to amplify the announcement made in a joint statement, or to say specifically what authority should be given to the small powers on the council in relation to the big nations.

The joint statement said: "After a week of discussions, the three heads of delegations are happy to announce that there is general agreement among them to recommend that the proposed international organization for peace and security should provide for:

"1. An assembly composed of representatives of all peace-loving nations based on the principle of sovereign equality.

"2. A council composed of a smaller number of members in which the principal states will be joined by a number of other states to be elected periodically.

Procedure Discussed
"3. Effective means for the peaceful settlements of disputes, including an international court of justice for the adjudication of justifiable questions, and also the applications of such other means as may be necessary for maintenance of peace and security.

"The delegations are continuing to discuss the structure and jurisdiction of the various organs and methods of procedure.

"These topics require a great deal of consideration, and a number of proposals are now being submitted to examination. Different proposals of the different countries do not necessarily indicate disagreement of conflicting points of view but stem from varied approaches to the common objective. After our work has advanced to a stage at which our fully considered recommendations have been formulated and our conclusions have been

Two Salem Soldiers
'Chuted Into France
Ahead of Invaders

Two Salem men, Staff Sgt. Andrew Periak and Pvt. Robert Piriak were listed today by the War Department as among a gallant group of Army paratroopers who captured St. Mere Eglise in Normandy on D-day before the regular infantry arrived to assist them.

For them the mayor of St. Mere Eglise had asked the decoration of the Pour le Merite, stating in a letter:

"For 48 hours these men, their strength reduced already by losses during the night, always alert for combat, separated from the sea by eight kilometers of hostile country, having on their right flank in the village of Fauville, towards Carentan, strong detachments of infantry and anti-aircraft units, on their left flank at Neuville au Plain two battalions of the German division, 1050 Hermann Infantry, composed largely of guns and tanks, and finally on their west facing the sea, two companies of fanatical Georgians who would fight to the last man—these American soldiers resisted alone with their sub-machine guns, two machine guns and two small cannons taken from gliders.

"These men I observed in battle. They did not show false bravado. They spoke little, one might say they only maneuvered. They went along cigarette between their lips or chewing their gum, hugging the walls, yet going along upright and quietly, under the careless shelling from the batteries of Azeville and Saint Martin."

The mayor concludes: "Forty-eight hours after their arrival, the magnificent work was accomplished by them alone. Two battalions had been cut to pieces. In the north, two battalions; in the south, one battalion and anti-aircraft units; in the west two companies of Georgians whose remnants barricaded themselves in a chateau at Beuzeville au Plain. They had destroyed eight tanks, some cannon and had taken 364 prisoners. Their losses were heavy."

Victims of Falaise Entrapment; Enemy's Losses Mounting

(By Associated Press)
BRITISH HEADQUARTERS.
Near the Seine, Aug. 29.—Allied troops killed or captured 122,000 Germans in the great Falaise entrapment, British Second army headquarters disclosed today, and still more thousands of Germans will be added to the toll from the disorganized enemy retreat across the Seine.

The 122,000—including 30,000 killed and 92,000 captured, a third of the latter wounded—represented the bag of American, British and Canadian armies through successive encirclements in the Falaise area up to Aug. 25.

The armies since that time have swept on, pinning the shredded remnants of Field Marshal Von Kluge's Seventh army against the lower Seine, and taking a new heavy toll. The figure was announced after five days of counting prisoners.

Even this huge bag has been swelled during the last three days and will grow again today as troops complete mopping up the last three remaining pockets in Seine river loops south and west of Rouen.

The trapped Germans have been fighting back with the desperation of trapped animals.

British troops fighting across the Seine east of Vernon have encountered a German armored division from Norway and there was speculation about the weakening of the Norway garrison.

SGT. JOHN SOBOTKA
FILLS VITAL ROLE

Sergt. John Sobotka, Jr., 26, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Sobotka, R. D. 5, Salem, is listed by the War Department as one of three district men serving with a forward fighter control unit of the Army air forces in the Italian campaign.

The outfit's two-fold job is to maintain a 24-hour alert against possible penetration of Allied territories by hostile planes, and direction of fighter bombers into given targets as well as passing on information about enemy air movements.

The unit has served in Tunis, Bizerte, Gela, Licata, Messina, Salerno, Cassino, Anzio, and Rome. Many of the outfit are now in France.

Sergt. Sobotka entered the service in December, 1942, and was sent overseas more than a year and half ago. He was formerly employed at the Mullins plant and received his training in New Jersey and Georgia.

Six-Man Committee Directed Successful Parisian Revolt

By EDWARD D. BALL
PARIS, Aug. 28.—(Delayed)—Six men, members of the all-powerful Central Committee of the Paris liberation movement, directed hundreds of thousands of Parisians in the revolt against the Nazis. They gathered in a candle-lit cellar Aug. 19 and gave the order from which flared the final, vengeful revolt of a city four years under the German yoke.

These men were known to each other only by fictitious names, but their organization kept German nerves on edge for four years. By word of mouth and by poster, raised by daring partisans, the word spread. Trusted members of the committee had rendezvous in the streets, and they would saunter past each other and drop innocent-sounding phrases, such as "the French beans are cooking" or "the post has been milked."

But hundreds of thousands of Parisians in the underground delivered these important messages. This story was unfolded by a Paris lawyer, a slightly built, fortyish Jewish partisan who looked more like a professor than the leader of a revolt. With him was one Mile, Suzanne, his secretary and one of the chief women members of the resistance movement, an attractive blonde under 30 who weighed less than 100 pounds.

These two joined 400 other patriots in occupying the two-block square Hotel De Ville, remaining to take pot-shots at the Germans with Colt automatics until the Allies arrived.

The leader told of the occupation of the prefecture by the Paris police and of the strike of railroad workers, both parts of the general plan. Relating the story of the Hotel De Ville siege, he said: "Most of our pistols were Colts which had been parachuted to us. By the end of the first day we had 50 German prisoners, and many more than that were killed."

There are many different groups of resistors under different names, but the high police came down from the central committee in Paris. The members never met twice in the same place; never telephoned and never put anything in writing.

"Our organizations included everybody," the leader said. "There were Socialists, Catholics, Rightists, Leftists, trade unionists, Communists and popular Democrats and Jews. As a Jew myself I must say the French people cannot be held responsible for the atrocities the Jews have had to suffer. That was the doing of the Germans."

E. LIVERPOOL PILOT

EAST LIVERPOOL, Aug. 29.—Lieut. Jack Hedenquist, 22, pilot of a bomber, was killed in aerial combat Aug. 15 in the South Pacific, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Hedenquist, were advised today.

In service a year and overseas since April, he was a brother of Capt. William Hedenquist, chief pilot of the Army Transition school at Kansas City, Mo., who was killed in an automobile accident July 3. Besides his parents, a brother, Richard, survives.

Sergt. Paul F. Pugh, 26, of near-by Calcutta, a turret gunner on a B-17 Flying Fortress, who was reported missing July 16 on a raid over Austria, now is a prisoner of the Germans, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Pugh, were informed. A brother, Tech, Sergt. Clark J. Pugh, a mechanic and gunner on a bomber, was killed on a raid Nov. 2 over Austria.

Americans On March Toward
Hitler's Reich

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 29.—Swiftly advancing American troops captured historic Chateau-Thierry and Soissons today in whirlwind advances which carried them over French soil hallowed by their fathers' blood to within 55 miles of Belgium and a scant hundred from the German frontier.

Fighting on ground where the men of 1918 routed the Germans in the second battle of the Marne, the GI's of 1944 swept through Chateau-Thierry and raced northward 25 miles into Soissons in a thrust which rapidly flanking the whole Pas De Calais department where the Germans launch their robot bombs. A new and more deadly trap might be forming around the remnants of the German Seventh army, broken in Normandy, and the 15th army, in Pas De Calais.

At Soissons, where the old First and Second divisions helped their Allies win one of the closing battles of the last war, the Americans were 55 miles northeast of Paris.

Troops were less than 50 miles from Verdun where a younger Marshal Petain near the start of the last war turned the Germans back with resistance congealed in the slogan: "They shall not pass."

The Americans and British bridgeheads on the Seine northwest of Paris were welded into a solid front of 25 to 30 miles when the troops which crossed at Mantes and Vernon joined hands. The assault front pushed 11 miles north of the Seine almost to the Rouen-Paris highway.

Canadians advanced within sight of Rouen, where Joan of Arc was tried and burned. The nearest Canucks were four and a half miles away.

Development Strategy
Southern France and its Nazi defenders were being chopped up by the same strategy of envelopment moves. American and French troops tightened a trap on the German 19th army in the Rhone valley.

The French striking westward from Avignon on the Rhone reached Uzès and pounded through the big city of Nîmes 14 miles from the river. Other columns, pressing northward squeezed the Germans in between Montclair Friday fanned out, annihilating more Germans. From Nîmes the Allies drove toward the French-Spanish border. On the eastern coastal end, U. S. troops reached within five miles of Nice, and 20 of the Italian frontier. Marseille and Toulon were completely liberated.

Two American columns crossed the Marne, destroying any German hope of resisting on that river of World War I battles. One advanced 16 miles northeast of Meaux to Couvergne, standing within 10 miles of the forest of Compiègne where the armistice of 1918 was signed and where Hitler held his triumphant ceremony of 1940.

These troops were within 16 miles of the Aisne.

Allied planes drubbed the Germans from the Seine mouth to the German frontier. Liquidation of Germans caught below the Seine was carrying rapidly to a climax. Already Allied armies had crossed the lower Seine, heading for the robot-plane installations on the Pas De Calais coast.

The Bad News From Europe

The news from the war in Europe, we have been saying, is good. The Allies are taking the measure of the Germans on every front.

But there is one front on which the Germans are doing damage on a scale that is almost beyond comprehension—the area in southeast England vulnerable to their deadly robot bombs. British Information Service in New York has announced that the attack has reached a pitch bringing the daily 24-hour total of houses destroyed or damaged to approximately 17,000.

If each of the 17,000 represented a 40-foot frontage, it would mean that every 24 hours the robot bombs are making rubble of the equivalent of all the housing on a street 64 miles long. Each day a good-sized town is being made uninhabitable. It is obvious at last why there has been a persistent rumor that the outside world was not getting a clear idea of the damage being done by robot bombs.

It is obvious, also, why everything possible is being done in France to wipe up the Germans in retreat and to reach the so-called rocket coast as quickly as possible. Most obvious of all is the revelation that the robot bomb is the most formidable new weapon developed in the war. It came too late to change the outcome, but the demonstration of its power has proved to be everything the Germans claimed for it as a secret weapon of the first magnitude.

The Osculatory Reward

A wartime peculiarity slighted in the records is the kiss which the beautiful lady bestows on the patriot who does his duty. The kisser is more often than not from Hollywood, though she may be one of the local good-looking, but the kisser is just any male who buys a War Bond at the right time, does distinguished service in a salvage drive, or signs up to work in a war plant needing men.

Who knows how many hopeful males have found incentive in the prospect that they, too, may pose for the camera sometime with a starlet's pursed lips approaching their quivering cheek? Who knows what slumps in war production might have happened if someone hadn't discovered the publicity value of the osculatory reward?

But there is one detail missing. The pictures usually show the patriots about to be kissed, but rarely actually getting kissed—obviously a photographic accommodation. What the men of this country who haven't even been almost kissed for publicity purposes want to know is: Do the kisseres ever really get kissed?

Squeeze-Out

For those watching Germany to detect the signs of war exhaustion, there has been no stronger symptom than Propaganda Minister Goebbels' order for a 60-hour work week for office workers in public administration and industry. Together with an accompanying order closing down amusements and restricting schools and previous orders abolishing many business enterprises—all with the purpose of diverting manpower to war industries—the 60-hour minimum advertises a critical manpower shortage.

Sixty hours of work a week cannot be called excessive in an emergency, particularly for office workers, but that standard is minimum; the maximum probably goes far higher. It has been discovered that attempts to increase the amount of work over that turned out at a peak of 55 hours a week quickly run into the law of diminishing return. A 60-hour standard, in other words, is an expedient of limited usefulness, because it exceeds the bounds of efficiency.

Realism

A recent act by Mississippi's state legislators has in a state of mingled confusion and admiration. The act imposes a 10 per cent sales tax on any commodity "the sale of which is prohibited by law." Certainly it's a little untraditional, and it may take some winking at illegal practices—at least as long as the boys kick in with the tax.

But somehow there's a nice mature realism about the law. Fines and prisons are deterrents to illegality, of course. They're also raps that can sometimes be beaten. But a 10 per cent bite out of every sale of liquor (Mississippi is dry by law) or black market gas or nylons—that's something else again. Especially since convictions for tax violation are relatively neat and simple.

It provides a new twist on an old saw: "If you can't beat 'em, tax 'em!" And we hope that next session the Mississippi legislature lays on a 20 per cent tax for hijacking.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, Aug. 30

Matters should move along under high tempo on this day and with much stability and common sense despite excitement, commotion, change, travel and swift-moving events. This in both social and business life. Quick action, clever grasp of opportunities, new agreements and associations, may bring decisive and lucrative results. In all pertaining to writings, publishing, travel, agencies, as well as in the realm of social, domestic and affectional life. Finances are fortified but need wise management. In a crisis the cooperation or favors of elders or superiors may be helpful.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of an extremely lively and exciting year, with sudden moves, and changes, travel, new contacts and also new contracts or agreements. Keen insight and sound conclusions and values may prove gainful, with elders or superiors ready to assist, where safe propositions are in view. But shun speculation and overacting. The same policies and tactics apply to social, professional, and domestic life. Romantic affairs may move likewise under high but pleasant tempo. Shun extravagance and all sorts of excesses.

A child born on this day should be exceedingly versatile and sagacious, with keen insight and ability to grasp worthwhile opportunities for success and happiness. It may have pronounced intellectual and social talents.

Basic Bureaucratess

By JAMES THRASHER

Bureaucratic jargon, or what Maury Maverick calls "gobbledygook" language, has finally proved too much for the bureaucrats themselves. The Social Security Board has launched a reform campaign, spurred on by the howls of baffled citizens and a rather embarrassing report from Columbia University's "readability" laboratory.

The Columbia researchers, arrived at the conclusion, by undisclosed but apparently sound methods, that a Social Security report is as much harder to read than a scientific journal as the scientific journal is than love story magazine fiction. So the board has appealed to its employees, in the name of clarity and economy of words, time, paper and public temper, to get off their rhetorical high horses.

"We are usually normal when we talk," the board wistfully admits, "but put a pencil in our hands or a stenographer at our side and a mysterious change takes place."

The board doesn't attempt to explain why, and we don't know all the answers, either. But certainly "gobbledygook" isn't the invention of bureaucrats. It is a collection of all the pompous triteness and gold-toothed turgidity of expression found in the working vocabularies of lawyers, economists, businessmen, social workers and the like.

And what makes lawyers, businessmen and the others talk that way? Well, the lawyers may have a thread of excuse, since they have found through sad experience that legal documents can be shot full of holes if everything isn't said a half-dozen different ways.

For the rest of them, it's probably just a way of feeling important. The ordering of 100 pounds of beans can be accomplished with heavy solemnity by using a few standard phrases which state the simplest thing in the longest possible way, and make the transactions as secret as a lodge ritual.

All this is pretty tiresome under any circumstances. But when the taxpayer finds that he is paying government employees to obscure and confuse his business and life with a lot of cant about "please be advised" and "pursuant to your request," when he beholds himself as something at "the local level" for whom policies are "promulgated" or "held in abeyance," he gets sore.

For all this we think we have a solution—Basic English. Why not give it a try by issuing one more directive at "the government level" which would compel bureaucrats to write only from this simple vocabulary. We should then be able to settle the arguments about the merits of basic, and also decide the question of whether government can function if the employees express themselves like human beings, not abstracts of title.

The question is raised of what to do with those German generals. Oh, just toss them on the Junker pile!

Wonder if the billboards are still out there along the country roads?

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

The Dramatic War Against Diphtheria

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION has for many years reported the deaths from diphtheria over the United States. The 1943 report has not yet been printed. But in 1942 there was no report.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

because there were no deaths from diphtheria in the United States. This is probably the most important medical event of the decade. It throws the sulfa drugs and penicillin into the shade. It is a truly epoch-making advance. If you had told a practitioner of medicine in 1890 that such a result was going to be accomplished he would not have believed one word of it, even a then up-to-date practitioner who was in the vanguard of progress on the then new germ theory and all it would accomplish for the human race.

I select the year 1890 because that was just before diphtheria antitoxin for treatment was introduced. At that time the average death rate from diphtheria was 50 per cent in the United States. The curative value of diphtheria antitoxin cut the death rate until by 1920 it was 13 per cent, 100-000.

Diphtheria Treatment

That was the first great step in diphtheria control. It was due to effective means of treatment after diphtheria had invaded.

The second great step was in prevention of diphtheria, so that nobody would catch it and that was by the use of diphtheria toxoid. This can be said to have begun about 1920. It was then that health departments began a systematic campaign of prevention in children of the pre-school age.

See what this second step—the preventive step—has accomplished. In 1920 the mortality was 13. By 1930 it was 5. By 1940 it was less than one per cent of the population. And in 1942 it was zero. No wonder the practitioners of 1890 would regard such a miracle as impossible.

The result has been accomplished not by any sudden discovery in science, but by the patient.

USE OF LABOR'S POWER

Editor, The News:

The need for collective bargaining and the right to bargain through labor unions are both too well-accepted generally to warrant debate. The question is, rather, will labor use its right so that in the future it will be easy, not only to hold it, but to extend collective bargaining to more groups of unorganized workers?

To use rather than abuse power is the challenge which was once aimed exclusively at employers. In the past, laws, both state and federal, had to be made to protect employees from the abuses of management's power. It would be a great credit to the good will and foresight of labor if it would work to keep its unions democratic, to make them alert to public responsibility without being forced to by law, and to use its power to the end that together, labor and management would enter a new era of voluntary peace-time cooperation for their own and the public's prosperity.

We, the public, ought to be patient, even in war time, when we realize that unionism on the present wide scale is new to our economic society. The future of unionism, however, rests in the hands of its present membership.

SO THEY SAY

We are going to win this war much sooner than we thought and the principal reason is that the American soldier has proved unequalled.

—Sen. Harry S. Truman of Missouri.

If we get off on the wrong foot of cynical power politics, we will have lost the war before we have won it.

—Thomas E. Dewey.

Our insistence on victory reflects our profound unwillingness to entrust our future to the enemy or to place any faith in his capacity to effect a tolerable settlement. This same insistence, however, imposes on us the obligation to prove that we can effect a settlement conducive to the future well-being of mankind.

—Dr. Everett Case, president College U.

We can no longer draw freely from our wealth, but must apply all our diligence and our gift for organization to overcome the tasks confronting us.

—Goebbels.

It is my view that the most important provision which can be made by the Congress and the American people for the future defense of the nation is a system of universal military training.

—Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

Japanese forces, which had been putting up a gallant fight against the enemy in the Myitkyna sector, successfully forced their way back to new positions according to schedule.

During the war everyone as a patriotic duty pitched in to help the war effort. After the war, the patriotic motive will not be so much in evidence. It will be every group for itself.

—Sen. Harry S. Truman, of Missouri.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Elizabeth Nelson, after dining with Irene and Matthew, decided that she would like to take the afternoon before undertaking her new duties, but during that time she came to the office at intervals for tea. She teased Irene about her misadventures.

"I'm not really fussy," Irene defended herself, "but Matthew is impatient if things don't just click."

"I'll click for him," said Elizabeth, laughing. "From nine to five. After that he'll have to click by himself. Bankers' hours, that's me. I've done twelve-hour duty too many times, and," she added, "when I don't have to, I mean when eight-hour duty came into fashion, I don't like it. I always wound up around the eight ball.... In this case the wrong eight hours."

Matthew liked Elizabeth and told her privately that she would prove efficient. "If she doesn't go and get married right away," he added gloomily.

Sam's bride was a trifle dubious, after she had seen Elizabeth for the first time. Hilda was an intense little creature and she said, confidentially, "I don't see why you pick out a blonde!"

"I'm one," Irene reminded her; "don't you like them?"

"Men," said Hilda, "are so susceptible. When I fell in love with Sam I actually dreamed seeing his outfit. I met him at a party and I know and called him mister all evening, hadn't the remotest idea he was an M. D.—someone muffled the introductions. Anyway, when I did see the office and found that Sam and Bill shared one nurse and one secretary and that they were both a million years old, I was so relieved."

Hilda, Keley is thirty-five and Hanson's about thirty-two."

"Old," emphasized Hilda firmly. "She was twenty-one. "Old and not specially good-looking. I was tickled to death. But as for patients—" "What about them?"

"Don't you ever worry?"

"Why should I?" asked Irene.

Hilda shook her head. "I'm different," she said gloomily. "I wish Sam had specialized in—in men."

"I don't worry about Matthew," Irene told her.

Hilda shook her dark head. She said after a minute, "Just the same, he's like any other man, he has an eye for a pretty girl."

"Of course he has," Irene agreed. "Did you think I married a blind man?"

She was faintly amused but not particularly disturbed. Irene had trained in a big hospital. She knew all—or most—of the answers. She knew a good deal about doctors and nurses and patients. But Matthew belonged to her. They were married. They loved each other.

Irene began to feel better as time went along and she came to the office now and then, as often as she could find an excuse to come, to help Elizabeth on specially busy days or to take over the telephone and patients while Elizabeth gave treatments.

Elizabeth did not resent this; she was fond of Irene and enjoyed working for Matthew. But she told her fiancé privately that Matthew was spoiled. First his mother and then Irene. "It's a shame!" she declared.

Her fiancé was a struggling young lawyer with an invalid mother to support and a sister to see through college. His name was Peter Moffat and he looked, Elizabeth thought, a little like Gary Cooper. Peter grinned at her now across the table of the little cafe where they were dining.

"What's she like?"

"Who? Oh, Matthew's mother. Grand person, lovely to look at, you'd never dream she had a son so old. I forgot you hadn't met her."

"Irene's all right," he commented, spearing some antipasto, "a little on the sober side, of course."

"She's one of the best. But I do wish she wouldn't wait on him hand and foot," Elizabeth said. "His mother did, too; still does. It's a shame," she repeated; "he's really a swell person, even if he is spoiled."

"See that you don't spoil him, too," warned Peter sternly.

"Darling, I have no time to spoil anyone but you."

"You don't do too good a job," he said glumly. "Shall we go to a movie?"

There was so little comfort for lovers in New York. They couldn't afford theaters and night clubs, but they could walk and window shop or ride in a bus. They couldn't go home to Peter's and listen to his mother complain. She was very hostile to Elizabeth in the sweetest possible way. They did not dare go to Elizabeth's.

Now she said, looking away from him, "I'm thinking of moving, some of the girls want me to share an apartment with them. It—it would be a place to go...." and she added quickly, "they'd be in and out what with dates and all."

He repeated quietly, "Well, Betty, how about a movie?"

The weeks slipped past and Irene felt very well. She was conscious of an enormous and patient peace, a sense of waiting and fulfillment. Matthew was sweet to her, very careful of her always, but he was away a good deal. Some of his newest patients lived out of town and he was likely to be called to Long Island or Westchester. He would come home late and turn on all the lights—he loved a blaze of light—and tell Irene all about things, wrenching at his collar, fingering a shoe across the room, chucking his coat over a chair.

"It's just that she never grew up," he might say; "she had colic as a baby, she still has it. It's amazing. On a hundred thousand a year you can afford to pamper a mild tummyache. Woman eats too much. Nothing else the matter with her, really."

"It's wicked," Irene might answer sleepily, "she must be crazy, calling you all hours of the night."

"I like 'em crazy," he'd answer, "when they pay their bills. Too bad I can't drum up an appendix for old Bill, but hers has been bottled since the Civil war or thereabouts."

After Matthew was asleep she would find she could not go back to sleep again. Often she would get up quietly and straighten out the Lt.-Col. Dermitt E. Tyler, 31, above, of Long Beach, Calif., has received three promotions since Dec. 7, 1941, when he was said to have ignored the warning of an enlisted man on detector duty that unidentified planes were approaching Pearl Harbor, according to charges of Rep. Ralph E. Church (R.) of Illinois.

MAN HAD BRICK IN HIS STOMACH FOR 10 YEARS

One man recently stated that for 10 years he felt like he had a brick in his stomach. This feeling was due to the lump of undigested food he always had inside of him. He was weak, worn out, headachy, swollen with gas and terribly constipated. Recently he started taking ERB-HELP and says the feeling like a brick in his stomach disappeared the second day. Bowels are regular now, gas and headaches are gone and he feels like a new man.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering. Get ERB-HELP. Lease Drug Stores, State and Lincoln Ave.

New Device Gives Airmen Hot Lunches While In Air

ORLANDO, Fla.—In order to provide long-range bomber crews with more than cold snack lunches, the Army Air Forces have developed small, electrically-heated food-warmers which are installed in planes.

The warmer resembles the ice-tray section of a refrigerator when opened. Prepared meals are kept piping hot while the boys do their stuff over an enemy target.

WITH THE ADDED CUPFULS OF EX-TANES

Sohio Ex-TANES mean 1/3 bigger bomb loads

Ex-TANES from Sohio help make it possible for Allied bombers to carry one-third more bombs than they once could. Why?

EX-TANES are "miracle molecules" of concentrated super-power. Sohio makes them from petroleum, by special refining processes, and just a few cupfuls added to a gallon of aviation gasoline "soup it up" into the world's most powerful fighting-grade fuel.

Today, these EX-TANES are supplying plus power that makes possible up to 33% bigger bomb loads—20% faster climb and 45% greater range for fighter planes.

One especially designed Sohio refinery was making EX-TANES when war came. Now, all Sohio refineries are producing EX-TANES in such huge quantities that Sohio sends them to 10 other refiners coast to coast and to our Allies. As a result, all types of Allied aircraft are now powered with gasoline energized with "the added cupfuls."

Today, our men and women at Sohio are making extra power for victory... tomorrow, they will make better gasolines for you...

Newest fabric for fall is the bright cotton-dotted satin used for the perky peplum and rolled collar which trim the slim-lined New York creation above. A yard of this multicolored print might be the answer to your question of how to bring up to date last year's good little black dress.

Household Hints

Tough cuts of meat should be cooked by moist heat. Stew these cuts, pot roast or braise in covered utensils with liquid added.

During summer try to include one hot offering in the menu, the cool foods will seem even more refreshing by contrast.

Parsley and celery leaves add interest and color to many dishes when the leaves are finely minced and used in small amounts.

Corn is good scrambled with eggs, creamed, scalloped with white sauce or mixed in with hashed browned potatoes.

Peel onions under running cold water and you won't shed a tear. A little salt rubbed on your hands will absorb any remaining odor.

Chilled canned tomatoes with a dash of salt, pepper and tarragon vinegar can substitute for a salad in a pinch.

To remove sticky buns or cinnamon rolls from baking pan when they have cooled, set them on for about a minute over low heat to soften the sticky part.

Digging the nails into a cake of soap before beginning work is a good plan for gardeners since it keeps grit from getting under nails. HOUSEHOLD HINTS: Fry muffin pans for making individual meat loaves.

Use kitchen shears for chopping parsley and chives.

Meat will be more tender if it is evenly flecked with fat.

Will you be lucky enough to have a glass roof over your head?

You hear a lot and read a lot about how the postwar world is going to be a kind of wonderland...

A wonderland of tear-drop automobiles, helicopters, clothing made from coal, and houses from glass.

It's all quite possible.

But let's not forget that these things won't come free of charge. Let's not forget that America as a

Today you have that money.

Are you letting it slip through your fingers? Or are you using it to help your Country win the war... and help yourself enjoy the fruits of Peace?

Every War Bond you buy and hold does both these things. Every $3 you invest now to back the

Salem Boosters Club To Launch Membership Drive Friday

Season's Plans Will Be Discussed And Program Adopted On Friday Night

In preparation for the season's opening against Steubenville Central on Sept. 15, the East Liverpool Boosters, coached again by Gerald Capezzuti, are going through the pre-season coaches at Patterson field every afternoon.

With plans completed for the launching of its most spirited membership drive in the three-year history of the organization, the Salem Boosters club in preparation for the opening of football season Sept. 15 will meet in the Memorial building at 8:30 p. m. Friday.

All interested fans are urged to attend the initial 1944 season gathering, when plans will be discussed for selling the annual booster membership tickets and arrangements made for future meetings.

Already on the fire within the club are plans for another football banquet, to out-do the big affair sponsored for the team last season, when Coach Paul Brown of Ohio State was the feature attraction.

Preliminary contacts are already being made to secure a top-notch speaker for the December event, club officials say, and if more satisfactory accommodations can be located a larger crowd will be in attendance this year.

Barrett to Report
With a goal for membership as yet unset, club officers are predicting a larger total than ever before. Estimates are being withheld, President Joe Kelley said today, until the members can confer on a figure to shoot for.

Coach Ben Barrett, starting his second Salem season, is expected to report to the club Friday on the progress of his charges in practice workouts. The Quaker coach generally takes part in the club's program and offers inside football information to the organization.

Club officers emphasized today that all Salem boosters, whether previous members of the club or not, are welcome in the organization.

CLAIMS OPPONENTS HAD PEG TOO HIGH

There's a dispute between the four members of the Vacationers' League club, a newly formed local pitching outfit.

Members Jim Primm and Joe Kelley are protesting a defeat—by a costly one-handed them yesterday afternoon. Now they are looking for the High Commissioner of Horse Shoes in Salem.

Primm and Kelley claim Barrett and Miller pulled the peg six inches too high in the playoffs yesterday afternoon. Now they are looking for the High Commissioner of Horse Shoes in Salem.

There are no membership requirements, said today, "except that you be interested in helping Salem's athletic program and willing to pay the membership fee, which is used to further our purpose."

The organization last season purchased 12 warm-up jackets for the team, had all games photographed, bought a pair of ultra-violet treatment lamps for injured players and sponsored the largest football banquet ever given in Salem.

Other Activities
Other activities also included sponsoring a basketball squad band, transporting the teams to out-of-town games and purchasing send-off gifts for departing servicemen. In two years the club has spent $2,551.02 on presents for 1,650 servicemen.

Proposed as projects for the club this season are banquets for the football and basketball players, erecting a flag pole at Reilly field, purchasing telescopic lens for the booster camera, and rushing the films to and from development so that pictures of the games will be available a day or two after the contests.

Bellfry Rings Bell To Thrill Permane

By BOBBY PERMANE

Famous Jockey

Winning five races a day for three consecutive days at Tropical Park last spring was thrilling, and my biggest bang came in the very last race of the meeting.

I had already won four races and had the mount on Bobby Permane in the eighth. Going to the post I kept thinking what a wonderful thing it would be if I could snag this one and complete a five-winners-a-day triple.

I could hardly restrain myself during the running of the race, I was so eager. So I began singing to Bellfry Chimes: "Ring that bell for me, Bellfry, ring that bell for me."

That kept my horse steady and my eyes popped out when my mount raced under the wire ahead of Budded and Farragut, giving me a world record.

ALLIANCE TEAM TO MEET SALEM HERE TOMORROW

Babcock-Wilcox Aggregation Booked for Centennial Park Contest

Another home game, the second of the week, will give local fans a look at the Alliance Babcock-Wilcox baseballers when they face the Salem Athletics at Centennial park at 6 p. m. tomorrow.

Finishing their regular league schedule Sunday, when they were eliminated from league playoffs by the Alliance Transue-Williams aggregation, the Babcock team comes to town armed with three creditable pitchers and a hard-hitting squad.

Finishing fourth in league standings this season, the Alliance squad got in on the Shamoney system of playoffs—between the top four clubs—and lost out in their first try Sunday. An over-all season's league record of about .550 is boasted by the squad and an average of nearly the same is listed in their out-of-town games.

Available Hurlers
Pitching for the visitors will be Paul Greenawalt, a talented right-hander. In case the need arises, Manager Jack McLaughlin has two other hurlers, Fred Franks and Bill Walker.

The balance of the Alliance lineup includes Manager McLaughlin at third, Ed Hartel at shortstop, Jack Frankfort on the keystone sack, Bill Conway in left field, Walker in right, Jack Kellner behind the plate, and Franks in centerfield.

Salem's Al Lydick, who wasn't around for action Sunday, is expected to be back in the city for the Wednesday game and will share the mound duties with Walt Smith.

Other Activities
Other activities also included sponsoring a basketball squad band, transporting the teams to out-of-town games and purchasing send-off gifts for departing servicemen. In two years the club has spent $2,551.02 on presents for 1,650 servicemen.

Proposed as projects for the club this season are banquets for the football and basketball players, erecting a flag pole at Reilly field, purchasing telescopic lens for the booster camera, and rushing the films to and from development so that pictures of the games will be available a day or two after the contests.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29—The recently-revised discussion of whether match play provides a true test of golfing ability leaves this corner cold. The argument against match play is that a player can blow a couple of holes with 7's or 8's and still win. But in a 72-hole medal tournament, the guy who ruins a round that way still has three chances to make it up, so what's the difference? After expending a lot of thought on a scoring system that would give credit both for match-play victories and medal scores, we found no way of making allowances for the ability to win when the chips are down, and its human fallibility that makes golf interesting. Any good mechanic could devise a machine that would shoot better than Byron Nelson, but no one would put up a $10,000 prize money for it to win.

MAY IN AUGUST
Before he started holding those Tam O'Shanter Golf tournaments, George S. May hired a crew of researchers who looked at weather records for 20 years and picked Mid-July dates as the best for golf. As long as he stuck to these dates, the weather was fine, but this year George had to switch to uninvestigated August and ran into a rainstorm on the big day of the tournament.

Four Way Tie A Reality After Demings, China Win; Round Playoffs Start At 6

The four-way tie threatening in Class A softball is now a reality, after the Salem China and Deming teams defeated their opponents, Mullins and Jim's, in contests at Centennial park yesterday.

The other two spots are taken over by the Salem News and Paxsons after Sheens signified yesterday that they were forfeiting to the News because too many of their players are out for football and cannot make the game.

Mullins lost to the China, 5-1 and Demings downed Jim's 5-3 in the two mud-laden battles at the park yesterday.

Now, with Paxsons, China, Deming and the News tied for the fourth round top spot, a playoff series to decide the round winner will be necessary.

Today at 6 p. m., the China is slated to tangle with Paxsons followed by a News-Deming game at 7. The two winners of these two games will meet at the park Thursday night to settle the knotted problem.

In the game yesterday both Jim's and Mullins operated with two less than a regulation team and lost. The China, minus their star hurler, Dale Ritchie, used "Batty" Morrison on the mound and batted out five runs on nine hits to win. Demings collected five runs on six hits to down Jim's 5-3, as Crawford did the mound work for the league cellar dwellers.

Powerful at the plate yesterday was Big John (Tony) Dermotta, who pounded out three hits in as many trips to the plate. The Pottery catcher also scored his first run of the year.

Kenny Brudery had Jim's well under control most of the way and gave up just five hits.

presented, our respective governments will decide the appropriate moment for publication.

Undersecretary of State Edward Stettinius, American delegation chief and chairman of the Dumbarton Oaks meeting, replied to every request for amplification with a statement that the information sought was still under discussion.

The "areas of agreement" so far worked out, it was learned, are concerned largely with workaday methods of solving international trade and territorial disputes and eliminating other sources of war-breeding troubles.

Such methods call for use of arbitration, mostly on a regional basis since it was felt that interested neighbor countries with a knowledge of local economic conditions should be more effective in such work than countries remote from the scene of trouble.

Canton Attorney Drops State Sales Tax Case

COLUMBUS, Aug. 29.—Jan Bruce Hart of Canton informed the Supreme court today he was withdrawing as an attorney for Hugh Foster in an application for rehearing of an action to force two grocery firms to pay to the state about $350,000 which Foster charges were sales tax collections never given the state.

Hart, in a communication to the court, said he objected to a paragraph in the motion for rehearing asserted that Judge Edward Turner of the tribunal had "a pecuniary interest" in the case.

Hart is the son of Judge W. L. Hart of the Supreme court, who disqualified himself during hearing of the action, brought against the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. The court refused to order the payment.

AMERICANS

The whole 85-mile Third army assault area east of Paris was swinging north to within 20 miles of Epernay and Vitry—the back door to Verdun—and was 35 miles away from the first World War seige citadel of Reims.

A Reuters dispatch from Third army headquarters said Vitry had been captured. This would put the Americans across the upper Marne, 100 miles east of Paris and a little over 50 miles from the frontier of the stolen French province of Lorraine which the Germans claimed as the boundary of the greater Reich.

Slashing toward the Belgian border 76 miles away, the American units which reached Cuvigneron were 20 miles from Soissons and Compiègne. The Aisne river which flows between these two cities links with the Somme into the last river defensive chain in northern France. A breach of the Aisne would flank any stand Field Marshal Gen. Guenther Von Kluge might hope to make on the somme to save the already menaced flying bomb belt.

Between Paris and the sea—where the Allies already were reported seizing more of the southernmost of the German flying bomb bases with each day's advance—the Canadians pushed over two bridgeheads to within a few miles of the German stronghold of Rouen on the back road to Dieppe.

American fighter planes flew 800 sorties in attacks on German communications ahead of the assault through northern France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and into Germany.

New Jersey has 15 per cent of all chemical manufacturing establishments in the United States.

BOSTON—During the past 40 years, Miss Martha E. Bruhn—the deaf mute's Dale Carnegie—has taught thousands the art of lip-reading. After six-months' study under the German master Mueller-Walle, Miss Bruhn herself could read lips in French, English and German. So proficient was she that once, after an hour's chat with Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, he inquired, "And how is your deaf mute sister today?"

Mademoiselle and Machine Gun

The War Today

the northern tip of France, and perhaps on the Aisne, which forms a more or less continuous front with the Somme. The valleys of both these streams were the scene of bloody fighting in the last war.

Whether the Germans will be able to pull up their socks on the Somme is a matter of some question. They are under increasing pressure from the great and exceedingly mobile Allied forces which are bent on trapping the Nazis against the coast of the English channel. Moreover—and this should not be overlooked the Allied air forces are taking a terrific toll from all concentrations of enemy troops and from forces moving on the roads.

This aerial slaughter of men, destruction of equipment, and the consequent disorganization in Nazi ranks certainly will make it difficult for them to reform for a strong stand on the Somme. However, they must make the effort in order to protect their robot-bomb launching grounds in the Pas de Calais area, and the ports of Calais and Boulogne only about 20 miles from the English coast.

While the Allied troops have thus been energetically building the scaffold on which to hang Herr Hitler, our high command seems to have given another display of acumen in placing the responsibility for the security of Paris in the hands of the French themselves. There still is a certain amount of disorder in the capital and we shall avoid friction by leaving it to the French military to deal with. The situation is such that display of armed authority by foreigners might increase the difficulty.

from Nice and only 20 miles from the Italian frontier.

Thousands of German troops fell into Allied hands with the surrender of the final holdout enemy resistance in Marseille. The full liberation of Marseille and Toulon gives the Allies adequate port facilities for any operations necessary, not only for the military campaign but for rehabilitation of liberated areas.

Surrender of forts on the St. Mandrier peninsula in the Toulon area brought an end to fighting in the coastal area.

The surrender of the St. Mandrier garrison came after the enemy coastal batteries were heavily bom-
